PATA announces the departure of its current Chair, Karilyn Brown

Due to her appointment as the new CEO of Performing Lines, Karilyn Brown will be standing down from her role as the independent Chair of PATA, effective from October 2013.

Karilyn has chaired the PATA Council since April 2011, working with Council members and stakeholders to provide a strategic focus and cohesive voice for the national performing arts touring sector. In particular, she has played a key role in facilitating PATA's engagement with the development of a national touring framework and the implementation of PATA's national performing arts touring action plan.

Karilyn's leadership has been transformational for PATA, which is now nationally recognised as a leader in performing arts touring strategy and policy. Her achievement in creating a highly effective and collaborative council is testament to her significant commitment and unequalled skill as Chair. We warmly congratulate Karilyn on her new appointment and look forward to continuing to work with her in a different capacity!

The Council is currently preparing the framework for delivering key priorities of the PATA strategy over the next 12-18 months, including ongoing implementation of the touring action plan. The process of appointing a new independent chair has commenced and we look forward to announcing this in the near future.
